Subject: World Oceans Day 2020 and the Tri Marine Sustainability Brief

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

Today we celebrate World Oceans Day, giving us a reason to pause and reflect on the importance of our world's oceans. With so much deeply upsetting news in our communities in recent weeks and months, it is nice to take a moment to find solace in the sea and show our appreciation for all it brings us. Our oceans mean many things to many people. For those of us in the tuna industry, we rely on our oceans for our livelihoods making it clear why it is so important that we respect and protect the marine environment.

Tri Marine recently released its 2019 Annual Sustainability Report highlighting the actions it has taken in making the spirit of World Oceans Day part of its every day business. Ensuring responsible tuna resource management and protecting the wellbeing of the workforce is the foundation of our trade and remains a top priority for myself and that of every member of the Tri Marine Group. I am excited to lead Tri Marine into this new chapter where sustainability continues to be at the forefront of what we do, making sure we balance the needs of our customers with the long-term viability of tuna fisheries and fair labor practices for all workers in our supply chains.

Since its foundation in 1972, Tri Marine has been a key player in the evolution of tuna supply worldwide. From its European origin the company has linked the East and West, building strong relationships with suppliers and customers based on trust and collaboration. This has been key to Tri Marine's unique success with joint initiatives aimed towards sustainability and social responsibility.

Today Tri Marine is part of the Bolton Group and now in a position to accelerate its initiatives by building on their resources and approach to sustainability and social responsibility. We emphasize working together with all our partners, industry players and stakeholders that we count on to continue driving positive change in the industry and with its people.

Thank you for your support and Happy World Ocean's Day!
